Description

The Diagnostic and Statistical Manual-Fifth Edition (DSM V) defines gender dysphoria as follows: "Gender dysphoria refers to the distress that may accompany the incongruence between one's experienced or expressed gender and one's assigned gender. Although not all individuals will experience distress as a result of such incongruence, many are distressed if the desired physical interventions by means of hormones and/or surgery are not available."

The World Professional Association for Transgender Health (WPATH) (<http://www.wpath.org>) is an international, inter-disciplinary organization, which publicizes evidence-based care and clinical guidance in its Standards of Care for the Health of Transsexual, Transgender, and Gender Nonconforming People, 7th Version (SOC). SOC is the primary reference for this policy.

Individuals, whose birth-assigned gender is male and who have gender dysphoria, are referred to as transwomen.

Individuals, whose birth-assigned gender is female and who have gender dysphoria, are referred to as transmen.
